

danielle.reyes Danielle Reyes
Professor Sidibe
NEW 210
3/13/19

“The Flowers of the Unknown “

I was told by my mother as a seed that the gardeners were our salvation
Our planters for a better life
But oh, how that garden rose was wrong
These gardeners pick and choose
Who to save
Who to throw away
And those in the way of their own “righteous” space

Oh! My lovely Mimosa
Lovely and light
At a touch, she flinches away
How they’ve tainted your air with their hate in which you swallowed up and ate
How they’ve pushed and pulled at your roots continuously putting you on the move
Oh! My delicate Diphyllia
Tall and pristine
How the toxic acid rain spit out by others
Caused your beauty to deteriorate and your body to bend and break
For our beauty
Remarkable
Yet unknown to the gardeners of a garden rose

For they can not see that your thorns and vines are the spikes of your crown
And your mixed matched petals are the opals of your collection
Rare
bright
And worn by few
For my flowers of the unknown
You do not need to be placed in a vase to know
That the light shined on a garden rose is also shined on you

“Do You Believe in Magic”

“Do you believe in magic”

It's quite a cliché,

To connect dreaming and believing to something of trolls and pixies

But Much like in a story retold and told again

I, like many have been told my road is nothing but mold, dirt, and sand

That the green soldiers are most likely not to march through

So I've tried to go on the road Of crystal gravel

But I felt cold

The gravel trying to leave imprints on my sole

Infront

A continuous line of forced partakers in aching pain

Some dusted in dirt with only tears washing it away

I tried and tried to start my wings but the colors of the sky was too bleak

No light could reach

So as the bitter winds of those whose road have been

Dried and cracked

Try to push me back

I'll stay rooted in my warm dirt cocoon manifesting it with colors and views unknown to you.

With purples

Blues

Every color in every hue

So an applause to the magician who helped me flee with using the word

annarasumanara